Speak frankly about the move. It is important to talk about all aspects of a possible move. The sooner you start preparing for a move the better.

Help sort. Deciding what to take and what not to take is often the hardest part of moving. We help with the difficult decisions, by suggesting alternatives, such as giving items to relatives or donating to a charity.

Take it one room at a time. Start with the easier rooms. Bedrooms and those laden with family heirlooms and photos will be more emotional to pack than others.

Set aside some sentimental items. That way, you will have the comfort of those items right away when you arrive at your new home.

“I wanted to thank you for all your help organizing and supporting my recent move. You went beyond the call of duty in helping during the hectic packing up and clearing out days before the move. I appreciate the advice and “how to” suggestions that you made and your knowledge of resources for donation of various types of household goods and equipment to organizations that are in need of specific items. Your efficient organization added greatly to the ease of my move...”

“Brenden & Linda showed up on moving day and put away all my kitchen stuff. They got the job done while I was worn out from the move earlier in the day. A week later they returned to help me completely organize my garage, including shelf assembly. Throughout the process they were helpful by encouraging me to donate or dispose of items I no longer need, which I don't do well on my own AND they hauled all of those items away. Very helpful people.”
